President's Welcome

On behalf of the Board of Directors, thank you for joining in the 33rd year of musical celebration at the San Luis Obispo Mozart Festival. This year has been especially challenging for the Mozart Festival and other arts organizations across the country, as the economic slump continues to have a negative effect on both ticket sales and on the contributions on which the Mozart Festival vitally relies.

Despite these many challenges, the Festival's Board of Directors, staff, volunteers and Music Director Clifton Swanson have all worked especially hard to bring together a high-quality celebration of music that we are proud to present to our community and to the many visitors to the Central Coast.

I want to take a special moment this year to recognize one of the Festival's most important group of people, our contributors. The Festival simply could not continue to be a cultural jewel of the Central Coast without our sponsors: the generous businesses and individuals who ultimately bring you the Festival each year. Please take a moment to peruse the long list of business contributors and individuals listed at the end of this book and let them know how much you value their support. We also ask that you reward our business contributors with your patronage and encourage their continued involvement with the Festival.

It is through the efforts of many people that the San Luis Obispo Mozart Festival continues to be not only a celebration of music, but also a celebration of the community synergy that occurs when many hands work together to create shared and uplifting experiences.

We look forward to sharing many memorable musical moments with you during the 2003 Festival.

Sincerely

Bill Dorland
President, Board of Directors

These performers synergize how Beethoven might have composed if he'd wandered through a Texas fiddle competition. Featuring the talents of Ellen Pennington Troyer, Violin; Paul Severson, viola, mandolin and Hardanger fiddle; Jennifer Sills, viola and Maggie Edmondson, cello. Guest string players from the Festival orchestra will also be featured for your 'consideration'.

Concertos: A Theme Essay

Gerard Hoffnung was a wonderful German/English cartoonist who caricatured music and musicians in such a kindly way that everyone loved being spoofed. In 1955 a group of English and Continental musicians decided to realize Hoffnung's cherished dream: a festival concert where everything happened as it did in his cartoons. One feature of this concert was "The Concerto to End All Concertos": The orchestra began boldly with the Tchaikovsky piano concerto, the soloist entered deliriously with the Grieg, and the battle was on. After much scuffling, the final issue became who got to play the last chord. Back and forth they went until, in his fury, the conductor accidentally broke his baton and couldn't continue, whereupon the pianist won the contest with a barely audible "pink."

What made it all so hilarious, of course, is the fact that whether in concert or in opposition, the individual vs. the group is one of the fundamental themes of human existence. For most of us, indeed, this opposition is more interesting than either of the protagonists, and certain Romantic period artists really did try to stimulate audience excitement by insinuating that the soloist and the conductor were somehow in competition. (And maybe they weren't just pretending, either, considering some of the egos involved!)

In less extravagant circumstances, of course, this dramatic aspect of concertos is secondary to the musical values, to the fact the soloist/group configuration can produce an exceptional variety of exciting sounds and interesting textures. The concept apparently goes back to the dawn of prehistory, to folk songs not unlike the "call and response" style of American gospel music--on which the Cypress String Quartet has now put a whole new spin (July 25, Mission San Miguel; August 1, Clark Center).

Concertos have certainly been a principal feature of the Mozart Festival since the Festival's inception 33 years ago, and never more so than this year. On July 27 we shall even hear a brief but lively history of the concerto, with examples, at the Chapel Hill Baroque concert. The Festival's way of doing concertos is especially collegial. This is due in no small part to Music Director Clifton Swanson's ability to work cordially with soloists as different from one another as pianist Mari Kodama (Opening Concert, July 18) and cellist Mark Kosower (Festival Chamber Orchestra, July 26). It gets even more collegial, however, when the soloists are from our own Festival Orchestra (violinist Ralph Morrison and oboist John Ellis, Mission Concert, August 1 and 2), or from the Festival Period Orchestra (flutist Stephen Schultz, Period Orchestra, July 22), or when the players simply take turns being "soloist" and "orchestra" as at the Baroque Concert. The ultimate in such collegiality, nonetheless, must be when the soloist and the conductor are the same person, when renowned Associate Conductor Jeffrey Kahane does his patented thing, serving as both soloist and conductor in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto (Closing Concert, August 3).

Yes, there are going to be lots of concertos, but there will also be chamber operas, two of them!], Hase's highly amusing Nicola e Damon on July 29 and 30 and Mozart's unfinished comic Le Nozze di Figaro on August 1 and 2. There will also be some outstanding chamber music, including not only the Cypress String Quartet but also the top-drawer Festival Chamber Players doing Mozart and Mendelssohn on July 20 and 23. The Quodvultdeum Quartet appears at the beautiful Chapman House-by-the-Sea on July 21, and the unique "All Strings Considered" program will be July 24, 28, and 30. As usual, there will be some not-to-be-missed recitals by pianist Mari Kodama (July 19) and cellist Mark Kosower (July 27) and, at last, wonderful soprano Maria Jeter will give a fascinating recital on July 25, assisted by pianist Susan Azaret-Davies and violinist Kathleen Lenik.

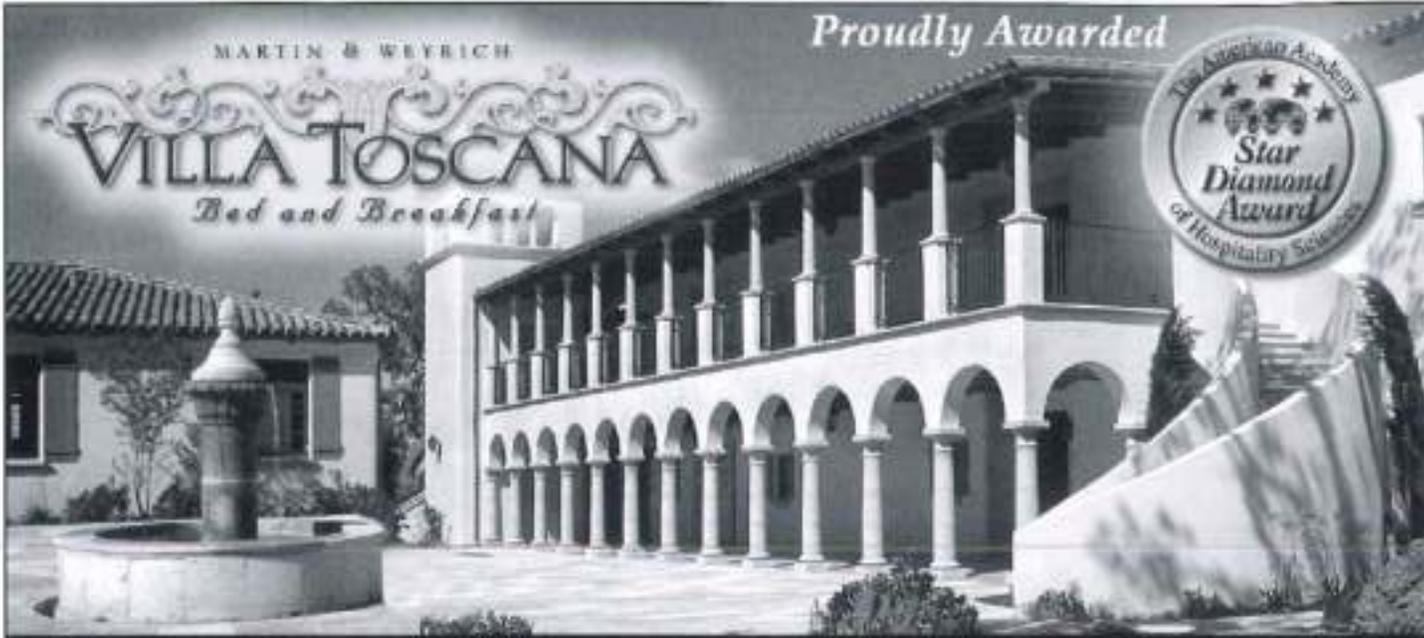

And even this isn't all. There will be jazz, the Hot Club of San Francisco on July 19 and 20 and Adam del Monte's Hammerin' Jazz Sextet on July 31 and August 2, and the famed AKADemie family concert will be July 22, featuring this time the totally unaffiliated Quodvultdeum Quartet. Outstanding free lectures in the Akademie Series will be given at Cal Poly on July 21, 28, and August 1, the Mozart at the Movies series is at the Palm Theater, and there will be four exceptionally enjoyable benefit events. Finally, we would especially recommend the Evenings with the Orchestra pre-concert discussions by our own nationally recognized music scholar Dr. Alyson McLamore, who will add so much to what can be included in these brief pages.

A note on Django Reinhardt and Gypsy Jazz....

Django Reinhardt is rightly hailed as one of the greatest guitar players who ever lived, but many people praising his accomplishments as a guitarist tend to overlook his roots in Gypsy culture and the musically fertile, polyglot Paris of the 1920's. Reinhardt and his companions used all these elements, along with American jazz, to create this new music, but the Gypsy heritage seems to be the most important ingredient. Once you hear it you can't forget it. It is sophisticated yet it has a sentimental quality. It is delicate but the rhythms are played at breakneck speed. It has a swinging, jazzy feel but many of the songs are waltzes. It is Gypsy jazz and the popularity of this sometimes flamboyant, sometimes melancholy guitar music is growing around the world. Aficionados everywhere are forming bands, called Hot Clubs in honor of Django Reinhardt's famous Quintet of the Hot Club of France.

Program Notes

Franz Joseph Haydn

Symphony No. 22, in E-flat Major ("Die Philosoph") (1764)

In 1764, Mozart was an eight-year-old prodigy; Salieri was fourteen; the "London" Bach had just moved to London; and the grand old man, Gluck, had barely produced Orfeo ed Euridice. Haydn, by contrast, had already served three years with Prince Esterházy and composed twenty-two symphonies. Sometimes we forget how isolated Haydn was on the Hungarian plain and how ahead of the crowd he became. Encouraged by his Prince to be original and required to be prolific, Haydn scrambled to try everything he could think of and then decide whether to do it again. Not every idea was repeated: Many excellent pieces remained one-of-a-kind, including "The Philosopher." Two of the symphony's novelties inspired its nickname: It begins with a solemn slow movement instead of a fast movement and it features rich, haunting English horns instead of oboes. Haydn would not return to either of these ideas, beginning future symphonies with slow introductions instead of slow movements and finding other ways to mix the light with the serious.

Johann Sebastian Bach

Concerto in E Major for Violin and Orchestra, BWV 1042 (ca. 1720)

Bach's violin concertos were written during his happy years at the court of Cöthen (1717-1723), probably for the talented leader of the Cöthen orchestra, Joseph Spiess, recruited from Berlin not long before Bach's own arrival. Bach's early biographer J.N. Forkel described the E major concerto as being "full of an unconquerable joy of life," an opinion which still prevails. The work is cast in the three-movement format made familiar by Vivaldi, but in his typical manner Bach intensified the interior of each movement. In the first movement, for example, with its three boldly accented opening notes, Bach superimposed the key scheme and ABA form of an operatic aria onto the customary alternation of orchestral ritornellos and solo episodes. Similarly, the slow movement's beautiful solo line is supported by a repeated bass figure almost in the manner of a passacaglia, while the finale is an exceptionally vigorous and symmetrical rondo.

Johann Sebastian Bach

Concerto in C Minor for Oboe, Violin, and Orchestra, BWV 1060 (ca. 1720)

It was almost certainly during the Cöthen years that Bach also composed a concerto for oboe, violin, and orchestra. This work is now lost but later, when he was in Leipzig, Bach transcribed it as a concerto for two harpsichords. From this existing work, then, scholars have used modern reconstructive techniques to restore the piece to its original configuration. The first movement employs the usual ritornello/episode form but is made especially interesting by the successive transformations the orchestra's ritornello undergoes before returning in its original form at the end. The slow movement has been called a sister to the slow movement of Bach's concerto for two violins: The solo instruments develop a broadly lyrical theme in imitative counterpoint over a pizzicato accompaniment from the orchestra. The work then concludes with a lively bourée-like movement.

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (ed. Raphaël De Vos)

Lo sposo deluso ("The Deluded Bridegroom"), K.430 (424a) (1783)

In 1783 a new Italian opera company formed in Vienna, and Mozart, apparently hoping for a commission, engaged a now unknown author to write a libretto based on Domenico Cimarosa's comic success, Le donne rivali. The full title was to be "The Deluded Bridegroom, or the Rivalry of Three Women over One Lover," with the deluded bridegroom being the elderly Boccaccio who has contracted to marry the young noblewoman Eugenia sight unseen. Eugenia's former lover, military officer Don Asdrubale, presumed dead, now shows up quite alive and is besieged by Boccaccio's niece Bettina and a singer named Melide. Boccaccio's friend, the misogynist Pulcherio, tries to console him, but after much monkey business transpires Eugenia marries her Don, the two-faced Pulcherio marries Bettina, Eugenia's guardian Gervasio marries Melide, and Boccaccio remains deluded.

Unfortunately, the commission fell through and all Mozart composed were the Overture, an opening quartet which springs directly from the Overture, an aria for Eugenia, another for Pulcherio, and a terzetto (trio). Even these were just in sketch form, except for the terzetto, and the excellent modern reconstruction has been done by Belgian musician and scholar Raphaël De Vos. Pulcherio was to have been sung by Francesco Bussani, who became Mozart's first Don Basilio, and Eugenia by Nancy Storace, the first Susanna.

Endowment & Corporate Contributors to the Mozart Festival

The Festival's Endowment Fund is a permanent account designed to help the Festival establish an increasingly secure and successful future by reducing its dependence on annual income sources. The investment income assures a more reliable source of support for speakers and enables the Festival to continue to meet the highest artistic standards in performance and educational programs.

Giving to the Millennium Endowment Fund continues your support in perpetuity because the principal will never be touched. Only the investment income from the endowment will be used to sustain Festival activities.

For further information on the Festival's Endowment Fund, please contact the Festival Office at (805) 781-3009 or by email at info@mozartfestival.com
